

ABSTRACT

This invention includes a method and device for producing water having absorbed wave motion energy peculiar to a color, the method comprising the step of 5 exposing to the sunrays a colorless transparent container containing water and a colored plate (harmless to the human body) or a colored container containing water, wherein sunrays are applied directly or using optical fibers or colored optical fibers for a certain time.